Our thanks to lawyer Aidina Dyo for helping to prepare the test.

Every fifth couple in Kyrgyzstan gets divorced. One third of them break up within five years of marriage. Over 13 thousand children are left with one parent, most often, with mother every year. 16.5 thousand children in Kyrgyzstan are born out of wedlock, and half of them do not know their father. Most likely, they will never know who their father is because they have blank “father” entry.

According to official data, 92 per cent of alimony non-payers are careless fathers. Therefore, our test is on behalf of a woman. However, you can take it regardless of your gender as the issue is the responsibilities of parents and child’s rights.

How to get alimony payments from your child’s father?

You are a single unmarried woman with a child. Five years ago you thought you met the man of your dream, the only one... But the day he learned he would become father was the last day you met.

You have had hard times but you did not give up and did your best to give only the best things to your son. But... it wasn’t that easy always. One day you thought, “That’s enough! Why should I do it all alone?” And you decided to go to court. What awaits you on your way to justice and in the struggle for your child’s rights?

You come to a lawyer and explain the situation. You need the alimony payments. The lawyer advises you to recover alimony payments from the respondent. But first, you should prove paternity.

You filed the lawsuit, but the judge rejected it because you did not pay the stamp duty.

The judge decided to carry out a DNA test. However, the respondent (child's father) did not come to the test.

You won the suit. The court found that your child's father is indeed his father and has to pay alimony. But after a month when the judgement must become effective, you learn that the judgement was appealed against.

The child's father started paying alimony payments. Their amount is 500 som (6.7 dollars). You hoped so much that this money would at least cover the expenses of son's swimming lessons he's successful in.

We are about to finish. If you get to this question, accept our congratulations. You are a man of nerve!

The situation is your child goes abroad with the swimming team for the competition. The trainer asks you to make a notarised consent to departure from both parents. You need to ask the child's father for a favour!

Here's the final question!

A year passed after the judgment. A surprise for you is summon to the court! Now you are the respondent. The child's father is the petitioner. He files a lawsuit to deprive himself of parental rights. Unexpectedly?

You are the one the test was made for!

See the comments with links to laws and regulations. The fate and welfare of your child depend on how well you know his or her rights and are ready to assert them.

Try to take this test again. Good luck!
